

Introducing the Engaging Manager programme

The BiteSize Engaging Manager programme is a new and different learning & development programme designed to improve the effectiveness and impact of line managers at all levels.

Comprising a wide and growing range of stand-alone learning modules, the Engaging Manager programme will appeal to anyone who has a team to lead and motivate; middle and senior managers alike.

Delivered in single 'bite-sized' sessions of just 90 minutes (face-to-face) or 60 minutes (webinar) by an independent and highly experienced trainer, this is a great way to provide targeted learning to up to 15 managers (face-to-face) or 100 (webinar) at a time for a small one-off fixed fee.

The BiteSize Engaging Manager programme is built around three critical knowledge areas:

Personal leadership – for all managers and aspiring managers

Team leadership – for managers with two or more direct reports

Organisational leadership – for senior managers and those making the transition into broader leadership roles

For each of these areas Gatehouse Academy has developed a number of individual learning modules designed to cover the fundamentals of the subject, introduce relevant theory, explore good practice from a variety of organisations and sectors, and share practical ideas which can be put to use immediately by participants.

More than 30 stand-alone modules are currently available, including topics as wide ranging as giving constructive performance feedback, using PowerPoint to tell stories, mobilising your team behind change and communicating organisational performance.
